GERMAN ROYALIST PARTY IS SHOWING RENEWED ACTIVITY

Followers Said to Be Occupying Strategic Points Throughout the Empire

BERLIN, Jan. 26-While Karl Helfferich, the Nationalist leader, was declaring in the Reichstag last night that the Monarchists "would not use this moment to launch a revolution to overthrow the Republic," reports were received here from Munich, one of the chief centers of Royalist activity, that the Bavarian Government had declared martial faw. The reason for this move by the Bayarian authorities was that the German Fascisti leader had defied their ban on the concentration of the Fascisti for a mammoth meeting at Munich, which the Government regarded as dangerous at the present

Simultaneously The Christian Science Monitor correspondent here is told by the best-informed circles in Berlin that the Nationalists were concentrating their followers at strategic points throughout the Empire, between 700 and 800 having arrived here by train from Munster and Osnabrück. Herr Helfferich in the Reichstag speech made an appeal directly to the Social Democrats for German unity. "It is not the question at this grave moment of a monarchy or a republic,' he declared; "it is a question of Ger-

The Reichstag buzzed with excitement when Herr Breitscheid declared "the French in the Ruhr are doing only that which the Nationalists did during the war in Briey and Longwy." Herr Breitscheid made it plain that while his party condemned the action of France and Belgium in occupying the Ruhr Valley, they would not be used as an instrument by the Nationalists to further monarchical aims and ambitions.

ASKED OF ENGLAND SOUTHAMPTON, Jan. 27 (By The

Situation Now Complicated Explaining that in America "You may have an executive which is willing to do a great deal for you but cannot because of difficulties" encountered in Congress, Mr. Baldwin

"In the early days, the Secretary of the Treasury could undoubtedly have arranged terms with the British Government, but the situation is now complicated because the matter is in the hands of the American Congress. You are not settling in America with the Cabinet at one end or with business men at the other. You are set-tiling with Congress and the Senate, which represent the people of Amer-ica from one end of the country to the other. In England if any terms are agreed on regarding the debt the Government takes the responsibility.

"On the other hand, what the executives in America have to do is to endeavor to force anything of this sort through Congress, and in doing so they may be beaten."

arrangement were arrived at by which an agreement between the American Debt Funding Commission and the British Government were approved and ratified by Congress before March 4 the matter would be deferred until 4 the matter would be deferred until the end of the year. There was no chance, he said, of new proposals being put forward previous to March 4, because the funding commission in America had put forward the only a chance of acceptance by Congress.

"They have gone to the limit in what they are likely to propose," he said.

"If no agreement is come to now the whole thing falls to the ground," Mr. Baldwin added. "The American commission was appointed and closely tied up by Congress—not given more favorable terms than those you are already familiar with. The British commis-sion, it was stated, made a proposal which it was not believed could win the approval of Congress and the American representatives thereupon made a counter proposal.

It was to be expected, it was stated that Mr. Harvey would continue to keep in close touch with the situation, though he has no special authority to conclude any arrangements for this

The British attitude is to be reported to the American commission next week through Sir Auckland Geddes, Ambassador to the United

HIGH COAL PRICES LAID TO MONOPOLY

Mr. Maurer Says "Big Eight" Is in Control of 70 Per Cent of Nation's Entire Output

Monopoly control of the anthracite coal mines is the cause of prevailing high coal prices, declares James H. Maurer, president of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor, an organcago this season. "Die Walküre" and "Parsifal" were the only works of his presented, and they received only three performances each in a season that ran from November through the ford Hall Forum on the subject of coal prices.

To a correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor he emphasized the fact, as presented in the recent report of the United States Coal Commission, that "there are only 174 producers of anthracite, and eight of these control 70 per cent of the whole output." The high profit taken by these eight companies Mr. Maurer says is responsipanies, Mr. Maurer says, is responsi-ble for the present excessive cost of anthracite. Incidentally, Mr. Maurer asserted passing brilliance, but there was a well-rounded production in which the benefit to Labor in Pennsylvania, both to individuals and to unions, in the conduct of their business with employers. The showing Labor made in anthracite and bituminous strikes was largely due to the increased Labor prosperity that followed the dry era. "The majority of the workers in Pennsylvania are 'dry,' I think, and though I do not wish to take issue with leaders of the American Federaon socialism, or merely as an enterainment, the opera evidently satissied.

Same Wages, Higher Prices

Mr. Maurer intimated that some times labor organizations passed 'wet" resolutions out of sympathy with the affiliated brewery workers, a whole with other workers. If debe given depends on the size of the cided on personal beliefs, the pro-community. That percentage needs to be increased. Of course, it takes jority of Labor in Pennsylvania out for enforcement, he indicated.

There were distractions that easily might have been avoided last night. There was no need, for example, to indicate by a horse's waving muzzle the proximity of the Valkyrs' stable. It would have been more effective to let the music describe the flight of the

In 1921, $2,722,027 was paid out in compensation; at the same time $0,500,000 tons of coal were mined on which the 10-cent tax amounted to some $3,000,000. The difference fetween 10 cents a ton assigned to compensation, and the $1.52 cents actually needed to defray compensation, was taken by operators.

Public Ownership Urged

Mr. Maurer urged public ownership for the mines as the solution of their problems, or in any case drastic federal regulation and supervision. Overdevelopment in the bituminous fields was keeping a surplus working force greater than the men in America's standing army idle all year through, he said, whose cost of maintenance was added to the cost of coal, while the men's lives were demoralized by intermittent work. New immigrants should be admitted only after these men were taken out of the mines and given other jobs, he said.

"Mockers at the idea of women enmockers at the idea of women en-gineers are only those who fail to realize that all the engineering proj-ects of the world must take definite form on blueprints before an ounce of muscle or brawn can be used," Dean Evans pointed out in a recent interview. "Great engineers do the plan work that must precede all manual labor put into actual construction. Thorough training in all phases of en gineering theory and experiment is necessary, and women have proved themselves capable of acquiring this training and of using it to the end of marked success in the practical field.

"Trained minds of women are just as capable of coping with practical engineering problems as are the trained minds of men. Expert draftsmen and planners must be efficient in figuring details as well as broad outlines of projects. The success of women in the engineering profession may be due to the fact that some of the most brilliant women entering the universities of our country take up engineering courses. SCRINIVASA SASTRI RETURNS TO INDIA

World Tour Finished, Distinguished Native Discusses Mission and Answers Critics

CALCUTTA, Dec. 25 (Special Cor espondence)—Scrinivasa Sastri has recently returned from his world tour which covered in the following order:
Australia, New Zealand, Canada and back to India via the United Kingdom and Europe. The mission cost in all 50,000 rupees, as to which some cities have complained that the same object could have been achieved without costs through the ordinary methods of diplomatic dispatches between one government and another. This, to say the least, is doubtful. Mr. Sastri is something of a statesman, and with the possible exception of Canada, there is every reason to believe that he met with considerable success and dispelled a good many illusions.

Speaking at Bombay and Poona, Mr. Sastri has discussed his tour and replied to criticisms. One of these was that he had subscribed to the "White Australia" policy, but Mr. Sastri had no difficulty in showing that the "White Australia" policy, in effect, was indorsed by the meeting of prime ministers and Indian representatives which took place at the Imperial Conwhich covered in the following order:

CHICAGO, Jan. 27—Existence in one large city for the young and untried girl worker has been made somewhat easier by the work of Ina Law Robertson, the founder of the Eleanor Association, a group of clubs organized for the benefit of small-salaried, self-supportin girls in Chicago.

Miss Robertson encountered as a "White Australia" policy, in effect, was indorsed by the meeting of prime ministers and Indian representatives which took place at the Imperial Conference of 1918, and that he merely inherited that resolution. He had, he remarked, considerable difficulty in convincing the Australians that be hind him there was not a flood of uneducated Indian laborers. In reply to questions why he had discussed Indian politics in the dominions and criticized other parties, Mr. Sastri stated that one of the greatest difficulties in his way had been "the low opinion in which the character of India and the Indians was held in the dominions, and therefore he presented the dominions might be able to judge whether India had taken place in India, so that the dominions might be able to judge whether India had taken advantage of the opportunities presented them in the matter of responsible governmatter of responsible govern-

LEAGUE SURVEYS ALIEN INGRESS

Would Not Allow Nations to Make America Dumping Ground for Minorities

A campaign of enlightenment on the immigration situation in the United States is being carried on by the Immigration Restriction League of which John F. Moors of Boston is president and Prof. Robert De C. Ward of Harvard University is secretary, by means of the collection and distri-bution of facts pertaining to it. The league maintains an office in Washington, D. C., so as to be in touch with the legislative and administrative authorities of the United States.

The league regards the present situation as critical and declares it is neither against immigration nor immidiscriminate, and unlimited immigration, letting in more of those who are not needed or desirable than of those who are, and encouraging wasteful exploitation of labor. Now that there is a limit to the number admitted, the league hopes that the country can gradually adopt methods that will give a better selection within that limit and to do better by those who are taken in. As state in an official communication, "We must have people who are not only wanted industries, but are sure to carry on our national character and tween improving our civilization with the good qualities that other nations give us, and substituting something else for that which has made us what

COMMISSION STARTS INQUIRY CONCERNING STREET EXTENSION

That an inquiry is now being made nto the entire matter of the assessing and paying of betterments and damages, as well as for the land nec-essary in the widening and extension of Stuart Street by the Boston Finance Commission, Nathan Matthews, former Mayor of Boston, is informed today by the commission, in reply to a public letter from Mr. Matthews demanding that full investigation be given the dealings he had with the city in the undertaking.

During Mr. Matthew's absence from the city for several weeks in Bermuda, Mayor Curley and James T. Moriarty, City Councilman, criticized the deal

"INDIA DRY IN FIVE YEARS," SAYS TEMPERANCE LEADER

Dr. J. Niyogi Declares Youth Have Pledged Themselves to Prohibition—"Spinning Wheel" Campaign Grows

far as this State is concerned."

The Governor admitted that he had asked Mr. Montague to serve on any ommission or other organization cre ated by the Legislature to cope with the situation, but was not certain whether he could accept. Montague is said to be the foremost traffic expert in the State. He was offered the place of State Fuel Administrator by former Governor Lake at the beginning of the emergency last fall, but was at that time unable to accept. From what could be leaerned of the Governor's conference with Mr. Montague, the latter pointed out that the next eight weeks will be the worst confronting the State as far as the

GREECE ENDEAVORS TO HELP REFUGEES

Provides Work for Some—British and American Organizations Help to Feed Them

Special from Monitor Bureau
LONDON, Jan. 2—The realization grows but slowly of the state of things in Greece resultant from the pouring into that small country of 800,000
Christian refugees from Turkish ter-

Hubert Digby Watson, honorary treasurer of the British "Save the Children Fund," an organization which is doing magnificent relief work among the refugees, returned here this week from Greece, where he visited the principal centers.

ited the principal centers.

Mr. Watson is a distinguished Anglo-Indian administrator, and is regarded as qualified to observe with knowledge and to judge impartially.

Interviewed by a representative of The Christian Science Monitor, Mr. Watson spoke freely of his experiences in Greece, where he had been given every facility by the Hellenic Government. He found a wonderful effort in progress to relieve distress, but the destitute were so numerous and so helpless that it had been possible to provide at all completely for

Disused barracks, camps, schools, factories and churches had all been indented upon for accommodation. Here rations were distributed and help of every kind given. Mr. Watson spoke highly of the work which the American Red Cross and other United States relief organizations are doing. The flour and other supplies they provided had been of inestimable value. The "Save the Children" kitchens are also enormously valued. He spoke with appreciation of the efforts of the Greek Government. In many of the centers he found refugees, who would otherwise have been destitute, in receipt from this source of either rations or of a money allowance. This allowance at current exchange was sometimes little more than a cent and a half (two drachma) per diem. It enabled the recipient, however, to purchase some coarse bread, which was eked out as it generally was by periodical doles of meat. The condition of the refugees varied in different localities, but so far misery rather than emaciation was noticeable. Fuel was exceedingly scarce. The sheds and other buildings in which the refugees were housed were often very cold and draughty. The refugees had arrived in many cases with little more in the way of clothes than what they stood up in. Their sufferings were increased by the fact that the winter this year has been unusually severe. Heavy snow fell in the hills round Salonika as early as Dec. 10 and icy winds have since swept down all the valleys from the mountains.

The refugees who are worst off are those from Asia Minor. They consist chiefly of the old, the infirm, and the very young, as most of the others were detained by the Turks. They belong chiefly to the classes of artisans and traders, for whom work is difficult to find. Many of them speak only Turkish, which does not enable them to communicate with the Greeks. Carpet factories have been started in Athens and elsewhere to afford them some employment. Promising drainage schemes to bring large areas of now water-logged and derelict land into cultivation in the Varda and Struma valleys and in the Plain of Philippi are also projected, and have in some cases been surveyed, but it is not yet known to what extent it may prove possible to finance them. The Varda Valley project contemplates the reclamation of about 500,000 acres at an estimated cost of something under £2,000,000. The Struma Valley and the Plain of Philippi schemes are smaller. Between them, however, they are designed to reclaim the respectable total of more than 300,000 acres.

Altogether these drainage schemes are capable of affording remunerative work for 20,000 laborers during the period of construction, and when completed should provide for 100,000 cultivators and their families. They are likely to be especially useful to the refugees from Thrace, who are generally in much better condition than those from Smyrna.

The Thracians are mostly peasants who can often be absorbed on the land. They are also, in many cases, in possession of cattle and supplies brought with them from their homes in sufficient quantity to enable them to maintain themselves for at least some months. They include also a much fuller complement of working-

The "Save the Children" kitchens are now feeding about 15,000 refugees of whom 9000 are children, the adults being provided for by the Imperial War Relief Fund. Enough resources are in hand at present to enable this work to go on, on its present scale, until next April, but the need for extension is urgent, and much more money than is now available could be laid out to advantage. The kitchens are all under home-trained superintendence. The subordinates in them are often Russians, themselves refugees from the Ukraine and other districts in which the "Save the Children Fund" has done such good work during the famine.

VALUE OF OFFICERS AS FARMERS DEBATED

VERNON, B. C., Jan. 20 (Special Correspondence) — Strong opposition to the Provincial Government's plan to encourage settlement in Canada of exofficers of the British Army in India developed at the convention of the United Farmers of British Columbia, held here this week. Adverse opinion was by no means unanimous, however, other delegates stating that as the ex-officers receive retiring allowances varying from $5000 to $20,000, they are just as likely to succeed as the business and professional men who have, in many instances, made good on the land.

A spirit of harmony and co-operation between the Tzechs and Germans is beginning to prevail over the ancient bitter rivalry for rule and domination.

Real economic life, which knows no national antipathies, has already brought together manufacturers and farmers of all classes and races within commonwealth. The German people, it must be remembered, though they are but one-third of the total population, have under their control apout 40 per cent of the industries, and are only too glad to have their share of the prosperity of the new state. They know only too well the sorrowful plight of their neighbor-

Furthermore, they are not unappreciative of the new freedom which the Republic has given them. A German school teacher told President Masaryk not long ago: "Under the old régime I had no real freedom, either personal professional freedom. But now I am Europe.

Under these conditions of co-operation, it will not be difficult to establish the basis for the admittance of German deputies and senators to the Cabinet. Undoubtedly, it can be worked out on the method of coalitions among political parties, according to their strength. At present, the Cabinet here is a coalition of all Tzechoslovak parties, from the Clericals on the extreme right to the Social-Democrats on the left. In Bengal the problem of primary education is not, it has been said, so much a one of expansion as of group-ing the existing schools in such a manner as to provide facilities where they are needed, and to reduce them where they are superfluous. A natural division is between municipalities and areas under the village unions about to be formed. Unfortunately, even the former have failed to rise to the oc-casion. But the majority of boards are still condering over schemes designed for their benefit, and in view of this apathy the best solution that been suggested seems to be to concentrate Government aid on those municipalities which display the readiness to share of the burden. That the Government should bear the whole cost, as has sometimes been suggested, is both unreasonable and impracticable.

TUCSON, Ariz., Jan. 16 (Special Correspondence) - An expedition that should prove of considerable interest to natural scientists throughout the country will be made in the near future by the National Geographic Soclety, for the study of the prehistoric dwellings of Arizona and New Merico. The expedition is to be launched as a result of the efforts of Dr. A. E. Douglass, director of the Steward Observatory of the University of Arizona. STATE BUYS TRACT FOR ITS VETERANS

South Dakota Will Give Ex-Soldiers Chance to Own

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Jan. 21 (Special Correspondence)—A land settlement plan for the benefit of South Dakota married veterans of the World War who are about to finish their vocational training has been decided on. The State, through its Soldiers Land Set lement Board, has made an investment of about $30,000 in land and buildings, to be repaid by the veterans in monthly payments of $50 with interest at 6 per cent. Eighty acres of farm land has been bought near Brookings, where the South Dakota Agricultural College is located.

The land will be divided into eight 10-acre tracts, and houses, barns, sheds, and fencing will be placed on present in charge of the Charcoal each. It is estimated that each project will cost about $3625. farms will be offered to veterans now taking vocational training in poultry at the college. The men will be se-lected by the veterans bureau, subject to the approval of the land settlement board. They must pay down not less than 10 per cent of the value of the land and 20 per cent of the value of the improvements. As the farms pro duce more the monthly payments will increase. It is estimated that each man will be able to pay back to the State the original outlay plus 6 per cent interest in about five years. The men are now on the pay roll of the United States Veterans Bureau.

The tracts are suitable for raising poultry and bees, and truck farming can be carried on to some extent. Dairying on a moderate scale also will be possible. Co-operative marketing will be one of the advantages of the colonization project, as the tracts lie within a few hours' run of Sioux Falls, Minneapolis, and other big market points. Co-operative buying also will be undertaken.

Horticultural classes from the college will lay out the shrubbery, trees and lawns. The ground will be broken and cultivated with the college tractors. All the work of the veterans will be under the supervision of farm

Movement Threatens to Introduce Awkward Complications in Political Situation of Fascism and its works in Italy, the growth of a similar movement in Hungary promises to introduce awkward complications in an already sufficiently chaotic political situation.

The dramatic side of the Fascist organization makes a strong appeal to the theatrical instincts of the Magyars. The fact that ever since the end of the war, political liberties have been the war, political liberties have been at a discount here, and that the only basis of authority has been violence, has encouraged the creation of an atmosphere in which the arbitrary methods of Fascism are likely to thrive. Hungary alone of the non-Russian peoples of Europe, has tasted of the state of the Polyherist regime and the fruits of a Bolshevist régime, and the memory of Bela Kun and his merry men, has left a very unpleasant im-pression on most Hungarian citizens. Any movement which professes to set up an impassable barrier against the return of the Communists to power, makes a strong appeal to the average person in Budapest and in the countryside.

It is precisely here that lies the danger, for Fascism in Hungary has passed under the control of the extreme monarchists and irredentists, men who openly defy the treaties of peace and aim at the reconstitution of the Hungarian state with pre-war frontiers, under the rule of the Haps-Thousands of law-abiding citizens who would not dream of working for an ordinary monarchist or na-tionalist league are lending their support to the Fascist movement.

Towards the middle of last month the Fascisti held a great national convention in the capital. They determined the basis of their organization, closely modelled on that of the Italian Fascisti. To a certain extent, the mask was thrown off; they adopted the name of "Hungarists," and one of the chief speakers was Stephan Friedrich, one of the leading reactionaries in Parliament.

There are indications that the Fascist movement will not be seriously opposed by him, although, for of scout age—there were no scouts the sake of appearance, he may show in those days—he was practically in

It were well that allied statesmen should keep a sharp eye on these developments. Fascism or "Hungarism" in this country is a purely artificial thing; there is no danger of Bol-shevism at all. The Bolsheviki have had their day, and that day will never return in Hungary. The movement is one which, under cover of anti-Bolshevism, aims at upsetting the thing of himself, yet never once for-

ATHLETIC STARS ENTERED FOR ANNUAL B. A. A. GAMES Turn in Fine Cards

Great Competition Assured at Thirty-Fourth Meet in the Boston Arena Next Saturday Night

Plans have been completed for the thirty-fourth annual indoor handicap meet of the Boston Athletic Association which will take place at the Boston Arena next Saturday evening and entries which have been received by T. J. Kanaly, manager, from the leading club and college athletes of the eastern part of the Unted States and Chicago make it certain that the performances in the various events will be tully up to the standard set in previous years. That the program is one which will appeal to followers of these games is amply shown by the fact that all of the available tickets have already been sold.

A change has been made in the program this winter which is sure to prove satisfactory to contestants and spectators. The events have been eliminated with the exception of the relay race between Phillips Andover and Phillips Exeter academies, which has always proved to be not of the features of the games in years past. The program is made up of five special invitation scratch events; five handicap events and the usual series of team races.

Close followers of the race are hoping that Otto Reiselt of Philadelphia in his 10 games on the read next week will not lose, as did Clarence Jackson of Detroit this week, an opportunity to make the leaders lengthen their strides. Jackson had a chance to go into second place by sweeping up a series of six games with the weaker contestants. Instead of that, he dropped from third to fifth by breaking even with H. H. John Hahman of Cleveland faces a severe schedule with eight games in the western loop, tackling Harry Wakefield at Milwaukee, Monday; P. E. Maupome at Chicago, Tuesday; Layton at Sedalia, Wednesday, and Denton at Kansas City, Thursday. Hahman has made some surprising sprints, but his performance has not been sustained. He starts in tenth position and will do well to retain it against the formidable field of leaders. He was to receive a visit from Gillette at Cleveland last Monday, but Denton was defeating Lopez in a postponed match that night. The Hahman affray was postponed to avoid conficting attractions. This delayed meeting probably will not be played next week. Gillette had a disastrous trip this week, losing all of his games on the eastern swing. Denton, who had been tied by Layton for first, recap-tured the lead by his double victory over Lopez last Monday.

BRITISH MOTORING OUTLOOK FOR 1923

Increased Sales Lower Price of Present Year Models-General Conditions Better

LONDON, Eng., Jan. 5 (Special Correspondence)—That the year 1923 is to be one of unusual activity and will show a revival of prosperity for Brit-ish motoring is evident. Even a cas-ual examination reveals that the prices quoted for present year models are based not only on the reduced cost of labor and material, but in ex-pectation of largely increased sales. pectation of largely increased sales. The general uncertainty of the last year—especially during the earlier months—has now given place to steadier conditions which favor increased sales. But the greater reason for the prevailing optimism lies in the rapidly extending field of usefulness of the motor vehicle in its many forms. The recent changes in condi-tions have brought into the ranks of motorists, many thousands who pre-viously thought motoring out of their reach. Evidence of this extension is seen on all hands, whether in the number of new dwellings equipped with private motor houses, the increase in size and quantity of public garages, or the ever-swelling road traffic figures.

The year 1923 will see some of th

earlier fruits of the Ministry of Transport's road classification and mprovement schemes. Short sections of a few of the new wide highways have already been opened to traffic, and many additional sections are nearing completion. The coming months will mark something in the nature of a revolution in the facilities for road traffic between important centers, as the new highways replace the old narrow and congested roads and streets. The main route numbering, at present incomplete and intermittent, will gradually assume order and meanwhile drivers are becoming familiar with the scheme of number-ing and classification.

Touring, whether by private car or char-a-banc, has become increasingly popular year by year since the armistice, and 1923 gives promise of furholiday making. Touring information, both for home and continental journeys, is eagerly sought, and the historic story of the British countryside finds ready readers. Many of the old inns are being rebuilt into modern motoring hotels, and the present year should see a further great advance in ccommodation provided for road

Already she is shipping tomatoes north to Boston and New York. The lettuce shipping season has lasted six weeks and will continue into May.

Strawberries will begin to move north within a few days.

Then, as the season advances, the shipping center will shift north along the Atlantic seaboard, and for a brief period will pause on the gulf. Texas will soon be shipping spinach, Louisiana strawberries, North Carolina sweet potatoes, Virginia spinach and potatoes. Then Jersey and Delaware will have their innings before the New York and New England early vege-tables are ready; and of course California has something for the table at almost every season. Her fruit and vegetable exchanges lead in the effi-ciency with which they put their produce on the market. One of California's best grown crops is asparagus. On the formerly over flowed and reclaimed land of the Sacramento and San Joaquin Delta, as-paragus finds its most congenial growing conditions. Nowhere is the ther expansion of these methods of holiday making. Touring information, acres of asparagus land just south of the city of Sacramento. Although not so renowned, California's lettuce, cabbage and potato crops are also important products of her-trucking regions.

New England buys its truck crops from all the trucking regions of the country. New England vegetable growers also produce a good quantity of these crops. With a wonderful climate, and her own natural fertilizer resources, and without an increasing part of our hill country, but it will be years before they fepre-sent any large percentage of our land used in this way." Continuing his discussion of the probable future of the dairying in New England, Mr. Haskell says, Dairying, as far as fluid milk is concerned, is more analagous to fruit and vegetable production than to animal husbandry. The product is bulky in-stead of being concentrated. But it is undeniably true that the develop-ment of the glass-lined tank car, selfrefrigerating, together with possibilities in the way of the manufacture of powdered milk, gives rise to serious thought as to the future of our New England dairy industry. I expect that, in time to come, the possibility of our producing milk in competition with other sections will depend upon the possibility of our growing feeds and forages upon which milk is produced. If this be true, then fluid milk farming will be analagous to beef and pork production." And so presumbably to be relegated to the human hill country to make way for the direct production of human food on the good meadow land that is now growing clover and hay. When the New England farmer is typically a regetable grower, as he is today typically a dairyman, we may expect to see him rapidly organizing for efficient production and marketing of those vegetable crops that the industrial communities all about him demand in such generous quantity.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 20—1000 ball pools are the greatest menace facing the national game, declared K. an exhibition of everything new in chassis and body designing, the introduced in the control of several new makes of cars. NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 26-Base-M. Landis, baseball commissioner, in an address tonight at a testimonial dinner to W. E. Commissioner Landis' declaration of war on the baseball pools brought the more than 300 men at the dinner to their feet with cheers.

"The principal troubles of baseball come from the outside," said Commissioner Landis. "With the help of the fans of the country. I hope to drive the baseball pool operators from the game in the five years I have left to serve as baseball commissioner.

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 27 (Special)-Pittsburgh and Milwaukee clash in the final contest tonight of their twogame series here, with Pittsburgh making a desperate effort to climb attention of the thousands who go to Mechanics Building, March 10 to 17, will be the decided increase in the size and volume of the accessory exwestern division of the United States western division of the United States Amateur Hockey Association was no match for the Pittsburgh stars and went down to defeat by the score of 5 to 1, the locals tying Duluth for third place. The locals scored three goals in the first period and two in the second, and then seemed content to rest at that for they played very to rest at that, for they played very easily in the last quarter. The de-fense braced whenever the goal was neared, which was not often. Smith, the fast center for the visitors, was off the ice most of the time, weaken-ing Milwaukee's offense. He was very close of H. J. Drury as regards speed and ability to carry the puck, and the local team seemed to mass its defense against him. With him off the ice in the last 10 minutes of play the visitors never gave Bonney any trouble.

The locals had the puck in the net very soon after the game began, when P. A. Sullivan shot straight at F. D. Moore, who defended well; but H. E. Darragh took the rebound and netted the disc as Moore was recovering his balance. A little later H. H. Milks came down the right side of the rink, and after turning around a number of times in an effort to shake off the visitors, eluded the defense and scored the second goal. This was followed by Drury in one of his spec-tacular dashes down the ice for the third goal just as the period ended.

The second period started off very slowly, but suddenly Darragh started down the center, and as the defense men rushed at him, he cleverly passed the rubber to Sullivan, who shot breast high and Moore missed as the net was reached. The visitors braced here, and gave the best exhibition of the evening, as far as their side of the game was concerned. Shot after shot was stopped by Bonney, who is one of the smartest goal keepers in the association, but finally Boyd, the right wing, came through and zigzagged his way among the locals until he was in front of the net, when he shot fast and hard for the visitors' ever possible, to show stripped chassis in operation. The result will be a more general effort on the part of the exhibitors to show, by means of tacked the Milwaukee fortress, Fred Bechard finally getting through for the fifth goal. In the last period the locals did not press very hard, and a slow period of play ended the game 5 to 1. The summary.

After the rehearsal I was introduced, and was pleasantly surprised to hear him speak English fluently. He made an appointment for an in-terview that evening. When we met he told me he was planning a visit to the United States next spring.

Money Needed for Festival

"Before the war I was on the point of visiting America," he said, "and I hope that this time nothing will happen to make me postpone my visit. Unless we get financial assistance from America it will be impossible for us to resume the Bayreuth Festivals, as planned, in 1924. What is your mode of composition?" I asked. "I mean, do you re-cord your ideas as they occur to you, you sit down and write the music to the text, as Bach used to do? "I keep a note book about me," he replied, "and write down my motives soon as I have them clearly worked out in my mind. Then I make my first sketch from these motives. After that I make a second sketch, and from that I proceed to do my scoring."

Correspondence)-The San Francisco Chamber Music Society played the entire sixth program of the series sponsored by the Los Angeles Chamber Music Society. Louis Persinger, first violin: Louis Ford, second violin; Nathan Firestone, viola, and W. V. Ferner, cello, presented a string quartet in A minor by Fritz Kreisler, the quartet by Maurice Ravel, and the suite in B minor for flute and string quartet by Bach.

Kreisler's sunny melodiousness and elegance of thematic disposition were much liked. This is a quartet which wins friends for chamber music because of essentially lyric qualities. There is a pleasing coherence in the

the work.
So much in praise. On the other hand, the question arises as to whether or not the whole is really worth the immense amount of labor involved in the writing and perform-ing of it; whether it might not have been expressed more simply, and whether after all is said and done the composer had anything original or striking to say. The suite excites no great desire for further hearings, although compositions constructed on so large a scale can scarcely be fully appreciated after a single one. The first impression is one of admiration for the composer's skill, but there is little emotional response to his music It was good to hear MacDowell's "Indian" suite again. Pennell's Water Colors

of New York City

Special from Monitor Bureau

LONDON, Jan. 2—Londoners have seen many artist's impressions of New York. From time to time American artists exhibit in London and it is regrettable that most of these exhibitions have been excluded from notice in these columns because it is rarely that really good American work is shown in England. This is a pity for the average Briton knows little of the green and the states. Thus the states are providing to the incorporation and election of a board of trustees and an institute of teaching and study to be devoted chiefly to art. The institution is to be liberally endowed and it is expected there will be provision for scholarships. in these columns because it is rarely that really good American work is shown in England. This is a pity for the average Briton knows little of the fine painting done in the States. True the works of the towering Dodge Mac-Knight have been shown in London and so highly esteemed is Sargent that Britons refer to him constantly as an Anglo-American with warrantable ealousy of his nationality. It is, therefore, an extreme pleasure to visit the surprising exhibition of Mr. Pennell's work at the Fine Art Society, Bond Street; surprising because the exhibition is made up of etchings and water colors and the water colors seem to the writer the more interesting. They are of New York as seen from Mr. Pennell's Brooklyn windows. In these water colors Mr. Pennell shows us that the American architect of today is producing a style pure as gothic in that it is the outcome of the needs of today just as the Gothic style was "the natural means of sobering the structural and other problems of the middle ages." Mr. Lethaby has said, "build honestly and beauty will follow." And it is this beauty arising from the honesty of New York that Mr. Pennell has searched out and presented with such unerring truth. A large number of the etchings and some of the drawings show that Mr. Pennell is attracted by man's mark on the fair face of nature. Gigantic engineering problems solved in impressive natural surroundings, bridges hrown across wide ravines and rivers, railroads cutting through the most re-lentless landscape, harbor boats, docks, leviathans of the ocean, all is spread with panoramic impressiveness before us If this were all it would not be much for photography could do as well. But Mr. Pennell invests every one of his drawings with rare mood His skies of dawn, noon, sunset, storm, and sunshine are chosen and painted with supreme skill, making pictures of high emotional value. And now let me say one of those paradoxical things which often is valuable in pushing home a point which becomes obscure when labored with words. It is that though it is the Gothic spirit of it all that enthralls Mr. Pennell, there is a Futurist feeling in the arrange-ment and selection of his data. Can it be that Futurism is also as old as the

In the foreword to the exhibition by Mrs. Pennell she talks of the view from "our old Adelphi Terrace windows" with "to one side, Wren's Lon-don, white with his unequaled dome and towers and spires rising above it; to the other, Westminster—beautiful, full of history, rich in association, but changing little from day to day. What was to be, we knew beforehand, one fog very like another, winters' dull sun and summer's long twilight repeating their loveliness in the same harmony and rhythm. I, too, see this magnificent panorama as I check this article in the office of The Christian Science Monitor, and I know from Mr. Pennell's drawings that New York rarely resibilities." Yes, it is the Futurist city with the Gothic spirit. S. K. N.

Special from Monitor Buresu

NEW YORK, Jan. 26—The early arrival of Max Reinhardt in the United States is indicated by the fact that Max Ree, who has been associated with him as artist and costume designer, has reached New York. It has been announced several times in recent years that Reinhardt was about to visit America. Now it is declared that the German producer is coming here to produce plays with American casts. Ree designed the costumes and scenery for Reinhardt's production of "Orfeus."

David Calmaister, a musical director of Lodz, Poland, in New York to arrange for the coming of the company of the Wilna Art Theater, a Polish aggregation, he said, similar to the Moscow Art Theater group now in New York. While in the United States Mr. Calmaister said that he would arrange for the taking of moving pictures of Jewish life in America to be shown in Poland.

Ethel Barrymore will come to the Longacre Theater on Feb. 12, in Alfred Sutro's comedy, "The Laughing Lady," which she will first act in Cleveland for a week. Her supporting company will include Violet Kemble Cooper, Cynthia Brooke, Alice Johns, Eva Leonard-Boyne, Cyril Keightley, McKay Morris, Kenneth Hunter, Harry Plummer, and Walter Howe.

The cast of "Rita Coventry," which Brock Pemberton is producing, will in-clude Dorothy Francis, Charles Francis, Grace Filkins, Alfred Hesse, Eugene Powers, Dwight Frye, Leopoldine Dam-rosch, Edward H. Wever, Jay Fassett, Auguste Aramini, and Clare Weldon.

Another play by Tchekhoff will be seen the coming week at Jolson's Fifty-Ninth Street Theater, when the Mos-cow Art Theater gives "The Three Sis-ters" as the fourth bill in its limited American engagement.

A new play by Charles Rann Ken-nedy will be presented by the Equity Players at a series of special matiness during February.

ontinues to merit the laying of laurels yet more thickly upon the laurels they have already earned. Not the least to their credit is the touch of genius shown in the choice they made, from their extensive repertoire, of the plays to present in America, and the order in which they are being offered. It was wise to open with "Tzar Fyodor Ivanovitch," elemental as far as dramatic writing is concerned but blazing with rugged oriental colorfulness and breathing in tensified Russian atmosphere. saluation—an elaborate and formal bow, so to speak, and es-tablished in us a mood ready to receive impressions. With standing squarely on their merit as depictors of a most varied assortment of characters, they again triumphed With the third week comes another astonishing change. A play as different from the first two as they were dissimilar, and of as much better drag matic value as "The Lower Depths' was better than "Tzar Fyodor." "The Cherry Orchard," as presented by the Moscow Art Theater Company, is the play so far in their New York gagement that will linger longest in memory. The performance is memor able because of the perfect under-standing and collaboration between playwright, producer and the players. The delicate, sensitive Tchekhoff has allowed us to look into the innermost secret of the Russian heart and the performance is given in a manner to command our respect for that secret. Here we have a play of symbolism and prophecy, a play in which each character stands for a unit in the complexity of Russian life expression. As it is presented the theater but the touching drama is there through it all. The play is acted in a light comedy ein, the vein of careless, happy-golucky children throughout almost the ntire action, with a continuous underlying current of tragedy. In this particular style of acting, so true to life, the Russian actors are past masters. Madame Knipper-Tchekhova as Madame Ranevskaya does not seem to be as entirely successful in this important role as might have been expected. In what should be her biggest moments her pathos seems forced. Constantin Stanislavsky on the other Constantin Stanislavsky on the other hand gives an almost perfect performance of Gaieff, the brother, childish, restrained and most touching in its final pathos. Vera Pashennaya's Varya is one of those gem-like portrayals of self-effacement so important in a piece of fine acting. Leonian and Luzhtant in a piece of fine acting. Leoni-doff, Podgorny, Gribunin, and Luzhsky each gives a performance of great excellence, and Moskin again demonstrates his versatility, this time playing the part of a buffoon. He is a fine actor.

the lack of leadership, outsiders could not be drawn into operations. It is thought that only one unexpected factor can revive the confidece in ultimately higher prices which was generally held a few weeks ago.

One possibility of revival was seen in the proposal to Congress to extend credit to Germany which followed the interview with Herbert Hoover in which he said that the outlet for United States wheat through Germany might be cut off by further complications over the reparations dispute with France. Hope of credits of some kind being extended has held back from the market much wheat that otherwise would have been of-fered at the high prices available.

Reports of large shipments of grain from Australia, India and Argentina, combined with the European turmoil and the pressure of supplies in the States, would have been enough to cause the collapse of the market under ordinary conditions. S. Davies Warfield

. DAVIES WARFIELD of Baltimore is a well-known figure in the railroad world. Long prominent in the South Atlantic states for his work in the development of that section, he came into national prominence in 1917, when he organized the owners of railroad securities into a countrywide association that now embraces in its membership representatives of owners of $10,000,000,000 of investments in American railroads—more than one-half of the aggregate holdings of these securities.

The Warfield plan for the solution of the railroad transportation problem was presented to Congress in 1919 by this organization, the National Association of Owners of Railroad Securities, with a memorial urging its adoption signed by 25,000 institutional and individual owners of railroad

To Mr. Warfield was given the credit by the Labor heads for the settlement of the strike of the 400,000 members of the railroad shop crafts last summer. He initiated and conducted negotiations that were concluded at a conference with the shop craft representatives in Baltimore, where an agreement was reached. His grasp of the relation of Labor to the prob-lem of national railroad transportation is evidenced by the important part assigned to Labor in the constructive program presented in the abovementioned proposals.

Mr. Warfield is president of the Seaboard Air Line Railway Company and completed, just before this country's entry into the World War, important extensions of this system in the south. He was the founder of a co-operative movement among the landowners of the south for the development of the unoccupied farm lands of that section, joining in this movement the owners of approximately 15,000,000 acres of land.

In his home city of Baltimore, Mr. Warfield is president of the Continental Trust Company and has been a leading figure in the development of financial, industrial and public service undertakings there. He was postmaster of Baltimore for 11 years, appointed by President Cleveland in his second term, being the youngest executive to take such a position. business and non-partisan administration led to his reappointment by both President McKinley and President Roosevelt. Increase About Three Cents a Pound Last Few Days-Mills Sold Ahead

New England cotton yarn spinners have advanced their asking prices for carded yarns 2½ to 3 cents a pound during the last few days, following the sharp gains in cotton. The higher level puts the northern spun yarns back into their relative position of some few cents above the similar grades of southern spun. Single tens are now quoted at 46c, twenties at 49½c, thirties at 55½c and forties 67c. The southern single carded cones are now 43c for tens, 46@47c for twenties, 53@55c for thirties and 64@65c for forties.

During the past year some of the northern spinners found it more profitable to complete the process by putting their yarn into cloth before selling. Since prices have been rising, however, the tendency to re-enter the yarn market has been strong and some mills are now offering yarn again, apparently depending on a quicker turnover at present high levels for profits.

ducker turnover at present high testels for profits.

Developments last month have put the northern spinning mills in a better position than for some time and some of them have sold their full production for two to three months ahead. More confidence is manifested in the trade and it is generally be-lieved that an era of industrial pros-perity for the mills has already been started.

Southern spinners are even busier than the mills in the north and some of them are operating night shifts. There is a tendency to produce yarns for stock, thus taking advantage of the rising market by not selling until the yarn is manufactured.

Heaviness Is, Noted in Certain Standard Issues — Few Strong Spots

Principal interest in today's brief and irregular session of the New York stock market centered in the further depreciation of foreign exchanges and buying demonstrations in obscure shares whose fluctuations ordinarily do not influence the central trend. Heaviness cropped out in a number of the standard shares, particularly Baldwin, Union Pacific, Bethlehem Steel and some of the foreign olis. Baltimore & Ohlo enjoyed a brief period of strength on publication of the December earnings statement showing an increase of nearly $3, 500,000 in net operating income. St. Paul preferred, Norfolk & Western and Lackawanna also moved to higher ground. Continental Insurance, Parish & Bingham Corporation and Kresge were among the strong spots while Royal Dutch, General Asphalt and Republic Steel preferred sold off 1 to 2 points. The cosing was irregular bond dealings. French 7½s and $ per cent bonds established new low records in today's early and irregular bond dealings. The 7½s dropped ½ to 84% and the 8s dropped ½ to 84% and the 8s dropped ½ to 81%. Seine 7s duplicated their previous low records at 78½. Other changes in the foreign group were small and unimportant. Except for slight heaveniness in some of the St. Paul issues, rallroad mortgages generally were firm. Northern Pacific 4s advanced 1½ points and Baltimore & Ohlo convertible 4½s, %. Prooklyn Rapid Transit issues continued strong. In the industrial group Cuba Cane 8s moved to slightly higher ground, while Marine 6s, Mitdvale Steel 5s and American Smelting 5s yelded fractionally.

$25 par. Only in 1920, when net profits for dividends was $31,089,372, have these earnings been exceeded. Last year's profits show a balance about $7,000,000 in excess of the $3 annual dividend. Results in 1922 were decidedly better than 1921, when net profits of $9,-286,129 equaled $1.41 a share and deficit of $8,770,871 occurred on the payment of the $3 dividend.

POCAHONTAS COAL RECORD

ROANOKE, Va., Jan. 26—The output in the Pocahontas coal field in 1922 was larger than any year since 1916. The net production was 16,161,782 tons, compared with 18,101,196 in 1916. Last year's output is estimated at 54.4 per cent of the potential output of Pocahontas mines. The cause for non-production of the remaining 45.6 per cent of potential capacity is distributed by operators as follows: Car shortage, 31 per cent; lack of market, 9.3 per cent; labor shortage, 2.9 per cent; mine disability, 1.9 per cent.

COPPER METAL STRONG

All the copper metal that had been obtainable from leading selling agencies at 14%c has been absorbed and sales have been made at 14%c, which is the prevailing quotation of all the leaders in the trade, except two large dealers, who have withdrawn from the market of the country price under 15s. at any price under 15s.

DANISH KRONE SLUMP

LONDON, Jan. 27—The recent depreciation of the Danish krone is due mainly to heavy purchases of foreign currency and German withdrawals of sterling and dollar deposits from Copenhagen. It is rumored that negotiations for a £5,000,000 loan have been denied.

NEW COAL CONCERN

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 26—A certificate of incorporation of the National Coal Corporation, filed by the Corporation Trust Company, provides for an authorized capital stock of 500,000 shares common stock, no par, and $10,000,000 2 per cent preferred stock $100 par,

Market Not Disturbed by Franco-German Problem - Money Easy-Rails Improve

NEW YORK, Jan. 27 (Special)-The situation in the Ruhr Valley has been the most discussed subject in international banking circles again this week. Even there a marked difference of opinion as to its seriousness was clearly in evidence. One international banker-a foreign exchange expert-said when asked for his opinion: "It looks serious. But I refuse to get excited about it when the pound sterling sells for $4.65 or thereabouts." And he added, "Whoever becomes pessimistic over the business outlook in this country because of present conditions in Europe will get left."

Narrow Market Prevails

These observations are mentioned simply to give some idea of the atmosphere in the financial district of this city, particularly as to its bearing on the stock market. While it may be inferred that the prevailing attitude conditions in Europe was that of indifference, the fact neverthe-less remains that those conditions had a decidedly restricting influence upon speculative, and to some extent, investment transactions in securities.

The happenings abroad have not been sufficiently decisive to justify de-tailed comment. The stock market was so narrow and professional that the same assertion applies to it. The activity in the relatively small number of issues that attracted special attention was the result of developments affecting them directly and not the market as a whole.

Special Stocks Prominent

Reference might be made in this connection to the severe drop in Fisher Body in anticipation of rather extensive financing, and to the abrupt advance on the offer of W. C. Durant to pay $200 a share for a controlling interest. On the other hand, the new Consolidated Gas stock advanced rapidly on the official announcement of quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share, whereas generally only $1 a share had been expected.

Announcements with respect to domestic affairs continued largely The reaching of an agreement with the bituminous miners, that will be in effect for one year from April 1, next, was gratifying. While it is too early to make predictions, naturally the hope is entertained that the outcome of the negotiations in this instance foreshadows similar action part of anthracite operators and miners when their case is taken up five or six months hence.

Money Still Easy

While both call and time money were a little firmer there was no real stringency. The fact that the rates for call loans did not go above 5 per cent was regarded as significant, because of the close approach of the months when further heavy disburse-ments wil be made for interest and dividends. There does not appear to be any real and significant change in general monetary conditions in this

The bond market here and at other large centers is in a process of absorption. The demand is expected to catch up with the supply sufficiently in the near future to justify further large offerings. Gratification was expresed over the prediction by the Treasury Department at Washington that the Government expects to be able to show a surplus instead of a deficit for the current fiscal year.

L. R. STEEL ENDS CONNECTION WITH HIS ENTERPRISES

Public Has Been Intensively Sohaving been eliminated Thursday by licited to Buy Stock in Various Concerns—Companies Continue

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 27-Leonard R. Steel, organizer and promoter of various L. R. Steel enterprises in million dollars has been sold throughout the United States and Canada, resigned today from all connection with the companies. His resignation becomes effective immediately.

The retirement of Mr. Steel came about as a result of a series of negotiations and conferences which have been in progress here for a week beween Steel executives and representatives of stockholders. Mr. Steel is said to have turned back to the companies a large block ous corporations and some cash and hands of the stockholders. that the steel companies hereafter will At Sioux City, Ia., anot a Denver banker. The sale of steel stock in Denver and surrounding territory ran into many millions.

Marwick Mitchell & Co. of New York, accountants, are going over the financial affairs of the several steel corporations. Unofficially, it is estimated that the total amount paid into the various steel enterprises in stock subscriptions is $26,000,000. The concerns incent debentures at 101, repayable in 1953.

erations and maintain them on sound business basis.

NEW PASSENGER STEAMERS

The two new passenger steamers which Eastern Steamship Lines have ordered from the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation for their New York-Boston service will cost $3.650,000 completely equipped and ready for sailing. Delivery in the spring of 1924 is specified. The financing of the boats is not expected to require any issue of securities; their cost will be met out of current assets.

FARMERS INCUR HEAVY LOSSES IN PACKING PLANTS

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 27-There is no way of telling how much money was sunk by farmers at the rate of $10 a head for stock in the United States Grain Growers Even less is being said of the $18,000,-000 sunk in independent and co-operative packing plants in the central west in the last five years, in an effort on the part of live-stock growers to which stock to the amount of many of Des Moines and the Sedalla Pack-$5,000,000. The stock was sold by expert salesmen to farmers at 25 per cent. When a receiver was appointed this company had $4,000,000 liabilities and no assets to speak of.

Expert organizers from Chicago took over the Stevenson packing plant at Sedalia, Mo., in 1917, recapitalized it, and sold about $1,000,000 worth of of stock, representing control of vari- stock, and then left the plant on the

The Midland Packing In 1922 th Company was built at a cost of $4,-000,000, part in promotion fees and commissions to stock salesmen. The physical value of the plant was much less. The co-operative forces, mostly farmers, that put up for the plant, operated if for a short time at a It was then thrown into receivership and the plant leased to Wilson & Co., who have never operated it exten

These experiences did not deter farmers from entering into another co-operative packing plant venture at Omaha. The Skinner Packing plant adviser, said the new executive board expects to continue all existing operations and maintain them. Dold Company of Buffalo is now operating it under a lease negotiated with the receiver appointed by the United States district court.

AUTO SALES CORPORATION

Auto Sales Corporation reports for the year ended Dec. 31, 1922, earnings after deducting cost of goods of $1,266,640, compared with $1,330,700 in 1921, and a surplus after federal taxes and other items of $34,581, compared with $96,311 in the preceding year. Mme. Galli-Curci Links Her Career With Canary

By WINTHROP P. TRYON

New York, Jan. 24 ME. AMELITA GALLI-CURCI the soprano, receiving me at her hotel in the fashionable part of Park Avenue yesterday after-noon, told me not only about herself a performer in the big realms of song, but also about an executant in a tiny realm. She, with her husband, Homer Samuels, admitting me into a suite of rooms of extraordinarily homelike ap-pearance, heard me amiably and answered me precisely on points con-cerning which I wished to make in-quiry; and in the course of doing so she narrated to me the history of a vocal creature that trills in an octave considerably beyond her own highest

Now when I go to see artists in the character of interviewer, I try to get them to speak as directly as possible, though, of course, I take care to re spect everybody's conversational individuality. I encourage them, for one thing, to put a predicate as well as a subject on their sentences; and for another, to avoid impressionism and symbolism. As for sentences, they went straight enough in the present case, because Mme. Galli-Curci is finely schooled in the English language. As for any tendency to impressionism, there was none; for she is very matter-of-fact in her way of saying things. But as for symbolism—well, what more naturally could happen than that the biography of a bird, as typifying the career of an artist in bel canto, should form part of the material she gave me?

Recognition in Spain

It came from my asking the soprano to set me right on the story of how she first won marked attention, or, in the word of musical reporting, how she was "discovered." She informed me that she made her earliest con-spicuous success at Madrid in the first of the war. I remarked to her year of the war. I remarked to her that she was the only singer I re-membered to have claimed Spain as the country of original recognition. She, for her part, assured me she found it a far from easy land to conquer; and she confirmed what I have known many artists to aver, that a Spanish audience is the hardest of any to please; but she maintained at the same time that no public is quicker to discern and applaud good work than that of the Madrid Opera. Almost of a piece with her Spanish experience was one in the Canary Islands, which she visited in the spring of the same season on her way South America. Teneriffe was the island on which she stayed; no other locality in the wide world, she de-clared, can be so rich in flowers. She was there long enough to give, if I have kept the details correctly, four concerts, using a theater as her auditorium. At the farewell a shower of rose petals was sent down on her from the stage loft, until she stood ankle-deep in the drift. In the midst of the proceedings a bird of the type for which the islands are renowned was presented to her.

with Spanish audiences and with audiences outside of Spain whose artistic traditions are Spanish, I should fancy that Mme. Galli-Curci would like to renew her associations with the people of Madrid and Teneriffe, who showed such appreciation of her in the beginning, and moreover showed her plenty of it afterwards. But that seems out of the question for another year at least, inasmuch as she has renewed her engagements for next season for opera in Chicago and New York and for concerts in the season of the people of the incidence of spain whose recitative approof of good taste on the cause she had always considered good recitative a proof of good taste on the vocalist's part. Recitative she active she active that the sudience will smy, Dame Ethel Smyth and other liams, Dame Ethel Smyth and other that called it forth.

Russians, and Bantock, Vaughan Williams, Dame Ethel Smyth and other liams, Dame Ethel Smyth and other that called it forth.

With many listeners, so keen is the same of the discrepancy between the has gone so far on the way as to give two concerts in one day devoted to music by Elgar, Vaughan Williams, Dame Ethel Smyth and other liams, Dame Ethel Smyth and other that called it forth.

That was five years ago, when she sag "Dinorah" under Campanini in New York and Boston. It is eight years since the people of Teneriffe presented her with the people of the description of Mr. Godfrey, as soon as opportunity can be made for it, to give a festival of British music, and already he has gone so far on the way as to give two concerts in one day devoted to music by Elgar, Vaughan Williams, Dame Ethel Smyth and other that the intention of Mr. Godfrey, as soon as opportunity can be made for it, to give a festival of British music, and already he has gone so far on the way as to give two concerts in one day devoted to music by Elgar, Vaughan Williams, Dame Ethel Smyth and other that the music at the the deciding of the description of Mr. Godfrey, as soon as opportunity can be made for it, to give a festival of B would like to renew her associations with the people of Madrid and Teneriffe, who showed such appreciation of her in the beginning, and moreover showed her plenty of it afterwards. But that seems out of the question for another year at least, inasmuch as she has renewed her engagements for next season for opera in Chicago and New York and for concerts in other American cities. But to pursue the "discovery" topic a little further, I should like to record the facts about her start in the United States. As she and Mr. Samuels on one side and I on the other compared versions, there was rather imperfect agreement, because what they had was correct, whereas what I had was largely legendary. With Mr. Samuels as referee, I proved that what I had was one of the current intrepretations; but I was glad to get in its place something authentic. A Four Years' Contract Mme. Galli-Curci visited the United States in 1916, to see the country, and particularly to see New York. She utility and importance. Another place time. Indeed, she had her plans shaped to go to Spain. But Mr. Campanini, the director of the Chicago Opera, invited pointed to the post of conductor of the winter or the post of conductor of the Chicago Opera, invited pointed to the post of conductor of the chicago Opera, invited her to make a couple of appearances with his company before she went. She consented, and by way of preparation took part one day in a rehearsal of "Rigoletto." Immediately after the rehearsal Campanini sought her out and offered her a four years contract, which she accepted.

Upon the singer's outlining the matter to me, I asked her something which I should never have been so bold as to ask had I not perfectly well known the answer.

"Did you," inquired I, "live up to that contract, notwithstanding the unlooked-for success you made at your first public appearance in Chicago?" "I lived up to every item of my contract with Mr. Campanini," replied she, "and enjoyed every day I worked under his direction.

Corrected on one question concerning the famous soprano, I sought light on another. That had to do with her studying, for I had heard that she never learned singing, but just sang.

"Study!" she exclaimed. "I never stop studying. I search constantly for some detail which I have hitherto missed. I delight in ascertaining ways in which I can improve myself, no matter how slightly. With a teacher? Yes, when I know one who has a sufficiently keen ear to discern how I can apply my tones to better advantage than I do. Good advice, I have learned, is not to be thrown away. But it is rare to find.

Canary Still Singing

In my talks with singers and players, I usually bring up the subject of musical criticism in some way or programs with just a sufficient flavorother. In this instance I referred to praise that was bestowed on Mme. Galli-Curci, when she was singing with the old Chicago Opera Company. for her delivery of the recitatives in "Dinorah." I told her I believed that To judge by the enthusiasm with hich she referred to her experiences ith Spanish audiences and with which she referred to her experiences the praise with great pleasure, bewith Spanish audiences and with cause she had always considered good the praise with great pleasure, because she had always considered good Russians, and Bantock, Vaughan Wil-

Musical Progress in English Shore Towns Special from Monitor Bureau

HERE is no question that if England generally is to partake in the revival that is taking place in inner musical circles, the pleasure resorts will have much to do in bringing about that result. That is why the work of Sir Dan Godfrey at Bournemouth, and of others at places had no idea of staying any length of that is falling into line is St. Leonwinter orchestra at the Palace Pier and with the hearty support and cooperation of the director, J. H. Gardner, is working so far as circumstances will allow on the same lines as his distinguished father.

To make haste slowly is a policy generally recognized as a good one in these matters, and Mr. Godfrey is at present giving only one symphony concert each week, though that is the most popular of all the winter entertainments given on the pier, and he is depending largely upon classical be expressed by the boisterous physical percussion that goes on about them. Yet, if that customary sound for any reason is suppressed, if the demonstration is withheld, the artist is likely to believe the audience cold and unresponsive.

The writer recalls a visit from Karl Pohlig, then leader of the Philadelphia Pohlig, then leader of the Philadelphia Orchestra, and a wall of grief from that temperamental maestro because the audience seemed so phiegmatic. Mr. Pohlig said: "It is printed in the program book, 'Ladies will please remove their hats.' Will you not ask them to put it also in the program book, 'Ladies will please remove their gloves, so they can clap?" It was difficult to persuade the aggrieved conductor that these femining gentlefolk did not mean to seem unapprefolk did not mean to seem unappre-ciative. They had always compla-cently assumed that their presence in the "heirloom" seats of the respecta-ble on Friday afternoon was a suffi-cient token of approval. The noise with the hands seemed a work of

Applause as Interruption

Moreover, the writer has lately taken occasion to remonstrate in sorrow, not in anger, with a noted leader of a famous old choral society for permitting the peace and dignity of the Christmastide performance of 'The Messiah" to be shattered with formance not as a concert of music out as a service of religion. It seemed to them as indecorous to applaud musical sentiments uttered in a deeply reverential spirit as to acclaim the reading of the Scriptures in a church n the same fashion.

We have seen a young artist, making his debut with a great orchestra, recalled 15 times by the galleries, and while we greatly admired the compatriotic spirit of appreciation and enthusiasm, we could not but deplore the utter disruption of the symphonic program that resulted. It was Joset Hofmann who earned the gratitude of the perceptive part of Philadelphia audiences by refusing to be stampeded into encores that used to be the rule for soloists with the Philadelphia

Edward W. Bok, who has always been most potent in the management of the orchestra, took a firm stand behind Mr. Hofmann, while the heathen raged because they were de-prived of their encores. Indignant letters were written to the papers, pointing out that the audience had applauded so loudly and so long that Mr. Hofmann's refusal to emerge from the wings was an overt and insulting defiance. But he was adamant, and he was right; and his stand for a program rightly proportioned and not distorted nor unduly prolonged is now recognized as a public service.

What the Audience Wants

The audience is not always entitled to get what it wants. The operatic conductor is often wise in defying its wishes, and decisively taking up the thread again, after the applause (if and the Audience one may use the common theatric parlance) has "stopped the show." It is a little curious to find artists in "recitals" answering the explicit demand for the repetition of a song, or other composition, with a wholly different showing pleasure when a musical perpiece of music. The writer once told formance is ended seems painfully Reinald Werrenrath that his audience

Society of Musicians Holds Annual Conference

Special from Monitor Bureau London, Jan. 12

S THE one organization in Britmembers are the rank and file of provincial music teachers, has sometimes been the basis of a charge that it is not a musical society in the higher sense, that the composer and execu-tant have no need for it and it has scarcely any need for them. Yet curiously its recent revival has been brought about by the strong movement for the registration of music teachers in which the society has been placed in a semi-official position, and at the annual conference held at Oxford, Jan. 2 to 5, the president, Dr. A. H. Mann, was able to announce that during the preceding year a large number of the leading musicians of England had joined its ranks.

A Significant Occasion

It was a significant, if not historic, applause after every solo and every occasion; for the University of Oxford, chorus. This gave real distress to many present, who regarded the pernot until recent years treated music not until recent years treated music particularly well, and Sir Hugh Allen in his inaugural address was able to give some striking instances of the progress made during the last 30 or 40 years. Moreover, not only was Sir Hugh, who, besides being professor of music at Oxford and a Fellow of his college, is principal of the Royal Col-lege of Music and a first-rate con-ductor, one of the chief speakers, but an official welcome on behalf of the university was given by Dr. A. H. Pember, Warden of All Souls, and a Pro-Vice-Chancellor.

Professor Allen, on the other hand was severely practical. He said the difference between a professional and an amateur was that the professional made money with his music and the amateur made music with his money, though the distinction was not perfect, as few musicians made money. He thought they were not sufficiently careful in allowing people to enter

There were a number of examinations, some of them very good ones, but they were regarded as attainments rather than qualifications. This question, however, was not allowed to pass untraversed, and several other speakers cointed out the difficulties of strong. pointed out the difficulties of fixing a qualification, particularly with regard to composers and executants. This business meeting was a delightfully racy affair, for the governing body was not allowed to go without very strong criticism of its methods, objection being raised to making the annual conference too much of a lacture nual conference too much of a lecture course and also to providing too little interest for those who were not di-rectly teachers. The constitution provides for all classes of members, teachers, executants, composers and, as the secretary, Hugo Chadfield, said, "even critics." (The present writer "even critics." RUM HOME THE

"Culture" in a Book on Etiquette

THE adventures of a word are necessarily varied and interesting: it travels from century to century; its meaning is modified by the conditions and thought of the time; it takes on a different significance for different users and hearers, even as a human traveler may wear different suits of clothes in different companies. Derived from agriculture the wood fouldars "when education from agriculture, the word "culture," when education was rare, became synonymous with learning and associated with scholarship; and then, as education became more and more an attribute of the wealthy and well-to-do, it became associated with the idea of social position. The sequence, you see, begins at one end with an honest, unlettered fellow following a rude plow and comes at the other to a modern "climber" industriously trying to get into "Best Society." But the word remains necessary, keeps its dignified and definite meaning, and is not at all likely dignified and definite meaning, and is not at all likely to go out of use in exact writing and speaking: our book of etiquette, for that matter, removes the ban when it says that "none of the words and expressions which are taboe in good society will be found in books of proved literary standing." The reason the word is disapproved is indicated by the remark, which admits no denial, that "to speak of the proper use of a finger bowl or the ability to introduce two neonle without a blunder as being 'evitroduce two people without a blunder as being 'evidence of culture of the highest degree,' is precisely as though evidence of highest education were claimed for whoever can do sums in addition, and read words

Yet it is true also that a man may possess culture and have trouble with sums; there are persons to whom it is easier to master a foreign language than to attain and keep a reasonable mastery of simple arithmetic. I know one such, for example; graduate of a distinguished university and unques-tionably possessing a certain degree of culture, who, when he has inescapable occasion to add up a col-umn of figures, finds it wisest to arrange his column in several smaller columns, add them separately, and then add the sums. And even so this pleasant gentleman is not securely confident of his final result.

But I am losing touch with my starting point, and my little train of thought is in danger of getting uncoupled. What, at the present time, is the real meaning of this word, and what its real value in the business of living? As Matthew Arnold defined it—"Culture, the acquainting ourselves with the best that has been known and said in the world"—"none of us, though he did nothing else all his days, could hope to attain a complete culture: and, in wery truth, those who possess a wide culture are so few that most of us are unlikely ever to meet one of them personally. Existence involves many routine and time-consuming occupations that are not cul-tural: each must be content with such fragments as can acquire in his so-called leisure, which, again,

Nor at first thought does this selected definition seem to define completely, unless, on second thought we realize that the "best that has been known" must necessarily include the best that has been done, and thus bring in the arts as well as the humanities. Observe the task imposed, for example, upon me: the brave and busy attempt to pass in review (even with the help of Mr. Wells and those who are joining with him in the effort to make it easier for me) the achievements of thought and action over a period to which the recent excavations in Egypt have added another thousand years or so, and to correlate my knowledge into a reasonable comprehension of the history of humanity!

But my fragment of culture is none the less important, though of no value whatever by itself as a ticket of admission into "Best Society." As Emerson said in his Essay on Manners, "Fashion has many classes and many rules of probation and admission, and not the best alone." By Fashion, I take it, Emerson meant what my book of social usage now calls, "Best Society," nor is it likely that conditions have materially changed since he made his comment. In my own small community I dare say mment. In my own small community I dare say am a member of "Best Society" myself, but this ocal and comfortable status would not necessarily admit me to "Best Society" in a strange metropolis my culture, such as it is, might help me to be agreeable after I was "in," but it would not, of itself, operate to prevent my remaining "out." Its utility is of another kind: without consideration of my social status, careless, indeed, of "Best Society." I find it helps me in the business of living by increasing the number of my interests, adding to my sources of pleasure, and informing me-though this. I must confess, I had not thought of till the question arose of applying Matthew Arnold's definition to myself-about the "history of the human spirit."

It is a good sign for the future that "culture" is being widely advertised, and that campaigns for the merchandising of books, including books of etiquette, are shouting, in effect, "Acquire culture, and you will

These results do not necessarily follow: the traveler is treading on the heels of a false guide to these objectives, yet he may be coming, to his pleased astonishment, to "some-thing just as good." Tibetan Sunsets

T IS difficult to make those who have never been outside Europe understand what sunsets can be. In England, as Turner has shown, there are sun sets to be seen containing in abundance many such elements of beauty as varied and varying in extent of colour. But the atmosphere here is so thick that the colours appear as if thrown on to a solid background. So the sunsets look opaque. On the continent of Europe the atmosphere is clearer and the opaqueness less pronounced. The colouring is in consequence more vivid. But—except in high Alpine regions—the clearness does not approach the clearness of Tibet. And neither in England nor on the Continent do we get the great distances of desert sunsets. And great distances increase immeasurably that feeling of infinity which is the chief glory in a sunset.

The clearness of the atmosphere is important in this respect also, that it produces the effect upon the colours of the sunset that they seem more like the colours of the sunset that they seem more like the colours we see in precious stones than the colours a painter throws on a canvas. There is no milkiness or murkiness in them. The sky is so clear that we see a colour as we see the red in a ruby. We see deep into the colour. . .

The variety of the colours and the rapidity with which they change and merge and mingle into one another is another wonder of these desert sunsets. It would be wholly impossible to paint a picture of them which would adequately express the impression they give, for the main impression is derived from light, and the colours are therefore far more glowing than they could ever be reproduced on can-vas... To get the least idea of the variety of colours merging, and intermingling with one another we must go to the opal, though even there is not the intensity of colour, and of course not the change nor extent.

From an orange-especially a blood orange-we get a notion of the combined reds and xellows of the sunsets, though the reds may range deeper than orange into the reds of the ruby or the cardinal flower, and lighter into the pinks of the rose or the carnation; and the yellows range from the gold of the escholtzia to the delicate hue of the primrose. And for the translucency of their yellower effects we must bring in the amber. Often there is a green which can only be matched by jade or emerald. And sometimes there is an effect with which only the amethyst can be compared. Then there are mauves and purples for which the precious stones have no parallel, and of which heliotrope, the harebell, and the violet give us the best idea. And the blues range from the deep blue of the sapphire and the gentian to the light blue of the turquoise and the forget-me-not. In these stones and flowers we get something near the actual colour, but the depth, the clearness, the luminosity, and the vast extent are all wanting, and these are all essential features of the sunset's glories. So we must imagine all these colours glowing with light and never still—perpetually changing from one to the other and shading off from one into the other, one colour emerging, rising to the domi-nant position, and then disappearing to give place to another, and effecting these changes imperceptibly yet rapidly also, for if we take our eyes away for even a few minutes we find that the aspect has altogether altered.—Sir Francis Younghusband, in 'The Heart of Nature."

WELL-KNOWN landmark on the Thames and one which has tempted many an artist is "The Harbour Master, Limehouse." And no wonder, for there is a quaint and characteristic pic-queness about these old-time structures which seem to grow out of the river. Miss Robinson has done full justice to her rather intimate and crowded subject. In places the lines seem to conflict somewhat, but the busy center scene is well placed in a setting of restful walls and housetops above and placid water below, lazily lapping against a number of strong piles. In what may be called the outskirts of the picture, however, the artist seems to have been more at her ease, more in her right element. Look at the way the chimneys, discreetly, yet solidly, stand against the cloudless sky, and the ease with which the olly surface of the old river is rendered.

The First Snowdrop

It is still Winter, but I have seen it, and doffed my bat in its presence, prompted first, I think, by admiration for the gay courage of this herald of Spring; and secondly by reverence for its chaste purity. What mountains of dirt its courage must have lifted as it pushed its head through Winter's covering of white, defying gravitation. How heroic of the little flower to venture all alone into this cold, stiff world; to fleck it with green; to wave its flag triumphantly to the tune of chilly breezes! How appropriately and charmingly it has attired itself to harmonize with its surroundings, as if too modest to demand attention. And how silently it has planted its standard of achievement and possession.

Dear snowdrop (I said), your arousal in such vitality awakens reflections in me; thoughts that swell and throng; thoughts of love and praise; and thoughts that lie too deep for words. I shall go forth a braver, brighter, and better man. You have thrown me from your pure heart the perfume of a living faith, a gesture of steadfast hope. You have set before me "an ever-expanding ideal of moral and spiritual beauty." Knowledge you have shown to me; and brought to me a strange, sweet

The Comforter of Promise

THERE are times in everyone's experience when not only is his own inadequacy realized, but the utter inability of human ways and means to comfort'and satisfy is felt. Unfortunately, even when this inadequage is felt, it is not always recognized for what it is; for men often continue to turn from one form of matter to a for relief and comfort, looking everywhere but in the right direction for surcease and support. Recognizing this human tendency, the prophet Isaish, speaking on behalf of God, said, "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth: for I am God, and there is none else."

Speaking later of the office of the Christ, this prophet stated it to be the preaching of good tidings. the proclaiming of liberty to the captives of material sense, and the comforting of all that mourn. Surely the prophecy found adequate and convincing fulfillment in the life and work of Christ Jesus; for the Scriptural accounts of his ministry show that he went about doing good, healing the sick, reforming and liberating those sin-bound who had become satiated with their evil ways, comforting the mourners by removing the occasion for their grief,-in short, overcoming every phase and condition of evil. including death. All of this was accomplished by means of his clear recognition of and consistent obedience to the truth as stated by Isaiah. Jesus knew God to be the only power and presence, the only law-giver and law-enforcer; and, therefore, he looked to God alone; and he never looked in vain. He recognized every form of discord, disease, and death as an arrogant claim against the omnipotence and omnipresence of God; and he annulled them by his understanding of spiritual perfection.

Christ Jesus constantly and consistently endeavored to make his followers see that because his works were inspired by, were in accordance with, and were enforced by God's universal, ever operative and impartial law of harmony and perfection, then it was possible for these same works to be done by all who understood and obeyed God's law. Thus it was that he made that simple, direct declaration of divine Love's unchanging nature to his bewildered and sorrowing disciples, after foretelling his betrayal and denial: "I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever." It was but natural and appropriate that the disciple, John, he who most clearly had discerned God to be divine Love, should have been so impressed by these words that he came the recorder of the prophetic promise ciples were troubled at the suggestion of strated from Jesus, for whom they had left a separated from Jesus, for whom they had left all, si who had for three years been their guide and cour selor. The God-inspired unselfishness which enable Jesus to meet and master every form of evil, enable him then not to think of his own impending tria but rather to comfort, reassure, and steady hi wavering followers. Surely, "the Spirit of truth, which he denominated as the Comforter, found add juste expression through Jesus at that trying

For about three centuries after Christ Jesus had pointed the only true way of thinking and living, his followers understood and proved in a degree the presence and power of the promised Comforter; for, until the theoretical acceptance of Christianity by Constantine, with the subsequent adoption of formalism and materialism into the church, the Christians had healed the sick and raised the dead

by spiritual means alone

Jesus' promise that the Comforter would abide with men forever was verified in the discovery of Christian Science, by Mary Baker Eddy. The Science of Christianity, thus discovered, demonstrated, and declared, does indeed proclaim "the Spirit of truth," the truth which makes men free. By it Jesus' further promise regarding the Comforter is fulfilled, "He shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you;" for Christian Science does teach us about all real things, explains away all mystery regarding God and His creation, and brings the Master's words to remembrance, showing that they are not mere pleasing platitudes or empty promises, but practical, provable statements based upon ever operative, unchanging, divine Principle; as Mrs. Eddy writes in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 78): "By it the sick are healed, the sorrowing are comforted, and the sinning are reformed. These are the effects of one universal God, the invisible good dwelling in eternal Science."

When the master Christian said, "I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you," he obviously referred, not to the personal Jesus, but to the Christ, Truth, which had so dominated his thought and life as to earn for him the divine title, Christ Jesus. It is strictly in accordance with the nature of God, good, infinite Love, that the Christ Science should be today realized as present, understandable, available, applicable to meet every human need. Christian Science is indeed the Comforter of promi

Jane Austen Among the Modernists

If there is a theory best beloved of the more less youthful writers who proclaim themselves the voices of the new age, it is this: Whatever is, is wrong. And because what is must necessarily be to some extent due to the work of the generation now in power, or of its predecessors, not to be young is to be wicked, since all virtue lies with youth, which is not responsible for things as they are, and the degree of whose praiseworthiness is the degree of its rebellion against authority, of its observance of a sedu-lously conventional unconventionality. Yet here comes Jane Austen, gentle Jane, the clergyman's comes Jane Austen, gentle Jane, the clergyman's daughter, brought up in a country parsonage to satirize all this in sheer lightness of heart.

Consider, if you please, the excessively "noble Youth" of "Love and Friendship," who proved his admirable character by his proud declaration: "No! Never shall it be said that I obliged my Father!" Naturally, "We all admired the proud Manliness of his reply," which his heartless papent had actually been so unsympathetic as to call "unmeaning gibber ish". How tynical of the "youth in revolt" we are all ish." How typical of the "youth in revolt" we are all

Lindsay: for particular reasons however I shall con-ceal it under that of Talbot" is surely a character-istic Jane Austen touch!—alone among the young people of his time in thus unfurling the standard of revolt. Laura, the supposed narrator of this novel in ernist frankness of profound self-appreciation: "But lovely as I was the Graces of my Person were the least of my Perfections," upheld the rights of youth to complete self-determination with a fervor scarcely inferior to that of Edward himself.

When she and her friend Sophia went—as uninvited guests—to visit the latter's Scottish cousin, Macdonald, they soon made the shocking discovery that he actually soproved of the man to whom his Macdonald, they soon made the shocking discovery that he actually approved of the man to whom his that he actually approved of the man to whom his young daughter Janetta was engaged. At once they seasout the welcome task of remedying this hideous state of affairs. The young man was said to be "Sensible, well-informed and Agreeable; we did not pretend to Judge of such trifles, but as we were convinced that he had no soul, that he had never read the Sorrows of Werter, and that his Hair bore not the least resemblance to auburn, we were certain that Janetta could feel no affection for him. The very dreumstances of his being her father's choice, too, was so much in his disfavour, that had he been deserving her in every other respect, yet that of itself ought to have been a sufficient reason in the Eyes of Janetta for rejecting him t. We had no difficulty to convince her."—Louise Maunsell Field, in the International Book Review.

A Tower Within a Tower.

If you will walk along Thirtieth Street toward Fourth Avenue you will see, tucked in between larger and more modern buildings on the south side, a little two-story-and-a-half wooden cottage, set back a few feet behind an iron fence. It must have stood there many years, for the wooden age in New York was long, long ago. It is a quaint little dwelling, with quaint pseudo-Gothic ornamentations, and until recently was used as an antique shop. A large weather-stained Venus stood upon the front porch, ironically beside a spinning-wheel! Now the house is untenanted, so that you lift your eyes the sooner to look above and beyond it. It occupies, of course, a slit between higher buildings. Through that slit, as you stand on the opposite curb, you look over a few spindly black chimney-stacks in the foreground directly to the Metropolitan Tower, looming up suddenly and unexpectedly. You see only that for a moment, because of its titanic size and white impressiveness. Then you notice something outlined against it, a lower tower, much more slender, a mere tracery of delicate shafts and belfries, and crowning it, her bow forever poised, the lovely limbed Dian. Whence either of these towers come, you see not. They merely spring up into the vision over the roof of the little wooden house, the darker one outlined against the other for comparison. Between and around them other for comparison. Between and around them steam plumes from unseen buildings drift like clouds. Diana turns a little, and points her shaft into the wind anew. The might of the new tower is mightler for this close comparison. Yet the other tower, too, does not suffer, its femininity is the more alluring. But lift your eyes as you walk through this common place cross-street of New York, and you see as pictures and a vista, over the quaint wooden cottage. turesque a vista, over the quaint wooden cottage, as any city, anywhere, affords—forty stories looking down on two and a half, and between them, in an intermediate flight, St. Gaudens' bronze Diana.-Walter Prichard Eaton, in "Penguin Persons and Pepper-

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

"First the blade, then the ear, then the full grain in the ear"

BOSTON, SATURDAY, JANUARY 27, 1923

EDITORIALS

Two notable contributions to moral and ethical literature, in the United States, were made yesterday, by two

New Standards of Morality gentlemen, professionally educated and holding positions which give to their utterances a certain importance. Dr. J. A. Benney, addressing the National Association of Railroad Surgeons, declared, with impressive emphasis, "The use of tobacco is one of the attributes of a gentleman." Nor did Dr. Benney wish to put any limitation whatever upon this attribute of gentility. He did not stop with the light and trifling cigarette, nor plead for the "fragrant" cigar renowned in poetry. Giving expression to his fullest convictions, he concluded by saying that every gentleman should chew tobacco!

Addressing another influential gathering of professional men, the American Bar Association, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia College paid his tribute to another "attribute of a gentleman." While he did not go so far as to say that every gentleman should drink alcoholic liquors, indeed disavowing any such practice himself, he very sternly reprobated, as the height of immorality, any effort to compel either gentlemen or others to refrain from such an indulgence. To Dr. Butler, whose mind is famous for the distinctly reactionary fields in which it finds its place to wander, the Eighteenth Amendment is something worse than Bolshevism, and narrowly approaches Antichrist. "The revolt against it," he said, "is not confined to men and women of intelligence and of moral sensitiveness in one section alone, but is nationwide. It will not do to attempt to silence these persons by catch phrases and formulas of the hustings; they regard its provisions and those of the statute based upon it as a forcible and immoral and tyrannical invasion of their private life and personal conduct."

Some time it will be interesting to consider at length the question as to whether the Eighteenth Amendment is opposed mainly by men and women of intelligence and of moral sensitiveness, or whether for purposes of their own the people who are interested in bringing back the liquor trade to its former position of pestilential power in the United States are not attributing these high qualities of intelligence and morality to anyone willing to co-operate with them. While it may be admitted that among a certain thoughtless, idle and wealthy class there is an inclination to scoff at this law, as indeed among too many of them there is an inclination to scoff at other moral laws, it is not in the main in the centers of intelligence and of moral sensitiveness that we find evasion of the law and reckless denunciation of its character. With all due deference to President Butler it may be said that for intelligence and moral sensitiveness the people of such states as Maine, Kansas, Iowa and the Dakotas, that voted prohibition many long years before it was put into the Federal Constitution, compare well with the residents of congested cities, among whom enforcement of the law is most difficult.

That the prohibition amendment is in a sense a limitation put upon personal liberty is perfectly true. Every law regulating the individual acts of men is such a limitation. But it is not an "invasion," as its enemies try to make it. For it is a limitation imposed by the consent of a majority of the people who have seen the great evils resulting to society from too unmeasured personal liberty expressed in its relation to the liquor problem. Government in itself is a limitation upon individual liberty. Anarchism is an effort to assert individual liberty at the expense of all government. There is no more bitter antagonist of anarchism than President Nicholas Murray Butler.

In the great university, of which he is the head, there exists a large organization of students, formed for the purpose of maintaining the enforcement of the prohibition amendment, and defending it against the attacks of its enemies. To be entirely logical Dr. Butler should expel these young men from his scholastic halls, as foes to public morals. It is, however, impossible to refrain from expressing the opinion that the students express more creditably the opinion of the body of seekers after learning, and of the multitude of law-abiding young men desirous of entering upon life under the best possible auspices, than does the president of the university himself.

Thoughtfulness and generosity are expressed in the realization, by the people of California, of their efforts in the setting apart and

A Bret Harte Memorial efforts in the setting apart and promised dedication, as a state park, of picturesque Mt. Diablo and its surrounding wooded areas. Thus there has been erected to Francis Bret Harte, facile and fanciful recorder of the historic mountain's myths and legends, an enduring memorial, a mute but eloquent reminder of his devotion to the self-imposed task of assuring to the early Argonauts a niche in the literature of their country. Mt. Diablo was to Harte what Mt. Tamalpais was to John Muir, and what the White Mountains and the "Great Stone Face" were to Hawthorne. Around it he wove many picturesque and interesting legends, rich in the myths of the Indians and the early Spanish adventurers.

By the setting apart of this forest tract as a preserve and playground, the towering peak of Mt. Diablo, from which once issued the signal fires and smoke carrying cryptic messages to the Indian tribes for many miles around, becomes once more the center of its picturesque little universe. Once the resort and supposed cache to which roving bands of outlaws and freebooters returned, it promises to guard forever the hidden secrets which tradition says have been committed to it. Detached from other mountains or ranges, Diablo stands, a lonely sentinel, guarding the valleys and bays almost at its feet.

Bret Harte's stories and legends form the link between the days of military and religious conquistadors who led in the campaign to claim the west and southwest for the King of Spain and the present. He has recorded, in the charming style which was his, much of the early history of California and the west, disguised in the form of story and legend. The mountain and park which are made his memorial were the background and "atmosphere" of several of his books. There could be no more fitting monument to his achievements and his devotion, and the sincere thanks of the people of the United States are due the thoughtful Sons and Daughters of the Golden West, whose foresight and generosity have made possible the dedication of this park.

Parliament

Croats and Slovenes from the impending elections to the Skupshtina, or National Assembly. Though the mandate of the old one would not have expired until June 29, 1923, it was recently dissolved by royal decree, as no longer representative of the country. Since the Constitution provides that new elections must be held within three months of such prorogation, the new members must be chosen before the end of March. The new parliament will convene the following month.

The next Skupshtina will have only 313 members, as compared with 419 in the old one. They will be elected according to the system of proportional representation which seems to be gaining in favor throughout Europe, one deputy to be chosen for every 40,000 inhabitants. The different provinces will be represented as follows: Little Serbia, 112; Bosnia-Herzegovina, 48; Croatia with Slavonia and Syrmia, 66; Slovenia, 25; Dalmatia, 16; Voivodia, 34; Montenegro, 7; Belgrade, 2; Zagreb, 2, and Laibach, 1. The former Parliament had been chosen as a Constitutional Assembly and had changed its character by its own vote. Along party lines it was divided as follows: Radicals, 96; Democrats, 49; Communists, 54; Croatian Peasants, 49; Serb Peasants, 30; Muhammadans, 27; Roman Catholic People's Party, 25, and the rest scattering.

If the new proportional election law is impartially administered, the many heterogeneous elements in the Kingdom that was so greatly enlarged after the World War, will have an opportunity to gain representation in exact proportion to electoral strength. The resulting Assembly may not be, on that account, any more harmonious than the old one, but it may win greater respect and confidence from the public. As in Poland, the racial minorities form an important part of the population, and the preservation of the unity of the country requires both moderation and political skill. The total number of inhabitants is about 12,000,000, divided as follows: Serbs, 6,000,000; Croats, 2,500,000; Slovenes, 1,000,-000; Macedonian Slavs, 550,000; Magyars, 450,000; Albanians; 250,000; Moslem Serbs, 625,000; Rumanians, 150,000; Germans, 450,000; other nationalities, 175,000.

Aside from this mixture of races the Kingdom contains politically hostile groups with separatist tendencies in almost every direction. Though occupied militarily by the Serbs, Montenegro is far from reconciled to national extinction. The Croatians, who in 1920 proclaimed an independent republic, demand local autonomy. The loyalty of the border populations, incorporated against their will for strategic reasons, cannot be strongly counted on. A firm central government may be necessary to keep all these elements together, but whether military force alone can sustain a healthy national life is far from certain. Then the foreign problems of the Jugoslav State are no less numerous than the domestic ones.

THE people of the United States have again been reminded of their responsibilities in world leadership.

Internation-

alized

Reforms

This time the warning comes through the International Labor Office, voiced by M. Albert Thomas. Appearing before the subcommittee on child labor legislation of the United States Senate, the Labor spokesman declared that the matter of child labor regulation is one of world importance, regarding which the future attitude of America will determine, necessarily, the legislation and customs with respect to it in the principal European countries. From the standpoint of the speaker, the subject was regarded solely from its economic aspects. He did not dwell particularly upon its importance socially. But he did take pains to call attention to the fact that at the Washington Labor Conference in the year 1919 a draft convention was agreed upon fixing fifteen years as the minimum age requirement in industry in all the nations represented.

Six of the European countries have already ratified the agreement. These are Great Britain, Bulgaria, Tzechoslovakia, Greece, Rumania, and Switzerland, and other nations, Denmark, Brazil, Chile, France, Germany, Poland, and Spain, are preparing to assent to it, awaiting only definite assurances as to the future attitude of the United States.

Of course the position of the United States is easily explainable up to a certain point. The policy of the country apparently had been finally declared in the congressional enactment designed to penalize child labor so heavily that the abuses committed under it could no longer exist. But it is hardly satisfying to those nations which have set about it to signalize in this great reform the sincere purpose of all progressive peoples to stand shoulder to shoulder in protecting their children.

There is no mistaking the desire and purpose of the great majority of Americans regarding this important world reform. The enlightening campaign which has been carried on has extended beyond the limits of any state or section, and even beyond the boundaries of any country. The demand for the strict observance of the convention drafted in 1919 is more than national—it is international, world-wide. There is no doubt that America will fulfill its pledge. A way will be found, and that right speedily, it is hoped, to crystallize and clarify American pubic sentiment. The delay now apparent, possibly unavoidable, promises to be as brief as circumstances permit. It is practically assured that a constitutional amendment will be submitted, and promptly ratified, making possible concurrent national and state legislation along the line desired.

PERHAPS the most important statement in Henry Ford's opinions concerning modern industrial conditions,

The War

Against

given in his recently published autobiography, was the assertion that waste in manufacturing processes is the chief obstacle to the efficient production that makes for general prosperity. The problem of avoiding these wastes has been the subject of serious study by engineers, chemists and inventors, and great progress has been made in great progress has been made in perfecting apparatus and methods making for the better utilization of materials and labor. To a large extent these investigations have been related to the manufacturing end of production. They are now being applied to what are termed the "raw materials" of industry, and it is found that here there are opportunities for avoidance of waste equally great as in the more advanced stages of manufacture.

A recent issue of The Iron Age contains a summary of a process for treating iron ores and coal, in which experiments have been carried on for a number of years by A. J. Moxham, former president of the Johnson and the Lorain steel companies. The great iron and steel interests are confronted with a steadily-decreasing iron content of most of the ore available in the United States, the percentage of iron oxide falling from 60 per cent in 1894 to 50 per cent or less at the present time. This change has made better methods of ore concentration highly important, and this has apparently been found in what is termed the "haloid" process, by which each of the various ingredients of the ore is purified and separated by chemical and physical reactions.

Exhaustive researches have demonstrated that in treating certain low-grade ores, of which there is a vast supply in the eastern states, the value of the ingredients other than iron recovered is about three times as much as would be the case with the old method of getting out the iron oxide only. These other products, such as alumina, manganese, phosphorus, sulphur, and zinc, are in constant demand, and their recovery in connection with the production of higher grade iron oxide will furnish a much needed additional supply. Similar experiments with coal show the possibility of utilizing what are regarded as inferior grades, while valuable ingredients are recovered by the purification process. There have been some dismal forecasts of the probable situation when the everincreasing demand for greater purity in iron and steel should outrun the possibilities for procuring high-grade raw material. The developments in connection with the new process would indicate that inventive genius will be able to make the supply equal all requirements.

Musical conditions are described as very bad the world over, in one respect or another. In Vienna, public concerts do not yield fees of sufficient amount, when turned into good money, to reward artists fairly for their efforts. In New York, private concerts, which before the war brought rich returns to performers, have been almost entirely given up. To speak comparatively, playing and singing do not pay. And yet, concert halls are reported to be crowded in Vienna today as scarcely ever before. And wealthy patrons in New York are fostering chamber music and orchestral music with a generosity that twenty years ago could hardly have been imagined. The honorarium offered by the managers to a vocalist, a violinist, or a pianist anywhere in Europe is said to be small. Often it is simply the honor itself of an appearance before this or that distinguished audience. That offered in the United States may, indeed, be ample, but the number of artists from which American managers may choose their beneficiary is so large that many a person must go ignored.

State the case, however, in whatsoever dismal words you will, the art of tone was never, probably, more popular than it is at present. Musical composition, which in war time seemed to be completely blighted, is breaking out of the bud in extraordinary fashion, as though the night of unsettled times were its best hour for blooming. Writers of conservative inclinations are turning out works in the style of the old masters in quantity. The radicals, too, are producing manuscripts at a rate that not even the most kindly conductors and the most obliging recitalists can keep up with.

In fine, the business of music is poor, but the cause of music was never more hopeful. The services of the musician may have been better recompensed before, but they have never been more desired. The composer may have been held in greater awe in former, times, but he was never more seriously listened to than he is today, be he a maker of conventional sounds or of ear-scandalizing ones, The old question, whether art expresses local feeling and portrays national character, or whether it pictures general human traits and accordingly represents an ideal that is international, must come up at such a period and be variously answered. But there can be little doubt that if any great piece of German, British, Italian, or French music-to take specimen possibilities-comes from this lively decade, it will be seized upon by everybody, as the fugues of Bach, the oratorios of Handel, the sonatas of Beethoven, and the operas of Verdi and Gounod have been, and made a universal possession.

Editorial Notes

Answering a temeritous querist who wrote from a fashionable locality to ask if the Ku Klux Klan were not a good deal like our college secret societies, the New York Times crushingly responds:

It is impossible to believe that anybody living on Park Avenue cannot see that the differences are many and great.

Such error might be understandable on the part of a mere resident of Madison Avenue, while of course it would be expected of a denizen of Brooklyn, or one having Hoboken for his habitat. Even Fifth Avenue, though furnishing the hall-mark for the merchandise of fashion, does not set the ineffaceable stamp of intellect upon those who still retain residences amid the shops. But Park Avenue, where apartments rent for $50,000 a year without attracting special attention; who could live there and not know everything about everything? The Times ought to expand its very brief attribution of omniscience to the residents of Park Avenue. Three-quarters of a century ago a man, having testified in an English court that another "must be respectable because he kept a gig," Thomas Carlyle coined the word "gigmanity" to express the idea of smug, middle-class respectability. The Times' discovery that all wisdom is housed in the towering flatbuildings under which the trains carrying the abased commuters of New York ceaselessly do rumble ought to be the means of further enrichment of the lexicon. How would "parkavenish" do to express the idea of fashionable omniscience?

THE present disturbances in Memel recall that this city has encountered a number of other storms in its nearly 700 years of existence. It was founded actually in 1252 by Poppo von Osterna, grand master of the Teu-tonic order, at first being called New Dortmund and afterwards Memelburg. It soon acquired considerable trade and joined the Hanseatic League, which was a union established in the thirteenth century by a number of the cities of north Germany for mutual safety and the protection of their trade. During the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth centuries Memel was sacked several times by its hostile neighbors, the Lithuanians and the Poles, and in the seventeenth century it remained for a time in the possession of Sweden. Three times it has been inthe hands of Russia, namely, in 1757, 1813, and 1914. After the battle of Jena, King Frederick William III retired to this city, and here in 1807 a treaty was concluded between England and Prussia. Incidentally, on the side next the sea the town is defended by a citadel and other fortifications, and the entrance to the harbor is fortified by lighthouses. In 1907, a Prussian national memorial was unveiled in Memel in the presence of Emperor William II.

Could there have been a more constructive keynote sounded at an annual meeting of the Canadian Society of New York than the sentiment proposed the other night as the "text" of the evening by the president of the society, John Hamilton Fulton: "America and Great Britain in a bloc for world peace and economic sanity"? Amplifying this subject, one speaker said:

The destiny of the world today is in the hands of the men who speak English. If the men who speak English are true to their common ideals, if they have the courage and sense to assume their common duties of leadership toward the rest of the world, there is hope for the future of mankind.

If we, on the other hand, permit ourselves to become the plaything of passion and the dupe of ignorance, if we draw back from our plain duties and listen to those who would separate us from each other and from our common task, then we shall see the clock of progress turned back a thousand years for all mankind, and we, too, shall be drawn into the abyss.

While it is true that America is "half brother of the world, with something good and bad of every land," let it not be forgotten that

If England's head and heart were one, Where is the good beneath the sun Her noble hands should leave undone?

AT A time when a certain class of medical doctors is clamoring for permission to use more alcohol, on the ground that the physician's sphere of usefulness is being hampered by the limitations imposed by the law, it is instructive to cast a glance over the extent of its usage in some of the large hospitals of America. Cook County Hospital, Chicago's great public institution, for example, has used no alcoholic liquor in the treatment of any disease since the advent of prohibition. Lakeside Hospital, Cleveland, O., with 300 beds and more than 100,000 outpatients, and with attending physicians from all parts of the city, had not one prescription for liquor turned in last year. Cincinnati General Hospital used none in 1922, and adds in its report that it has purchased no brandy or wine for a number of years. And so on through a long list. All of which goes to show that a great many physicians do not look upon these poisonous agencies as in the least degree health-productive.

DOUBTLESS, if the statistics were collected, it would not be only in St. Louis, Mo., that many children would be found who had never seen the common farm animals, though it must be confessed that the uncovering of the fact that in this city 40 per cent of them had never seen a sheep, 17 per cent a pig, and 12 per cent a cow, comes as somewhat of a shock. The proposal that the municipal zoo should receive examples of these animals for the benefit of such children is estimable so far as it goes, but it falls far short of remedying the cause of such a condition.

RESPECTFULLY commended to the notice of those responsible for maintaining in America the medieval prisons of many of the states are the news reports that the notorious St. Lazare prison in Paris is shortly to be torn down. If France can afford to make this sacrifice for the sake of humanity, can America lag behind in the race?
